Energy Education: Concepts & Practices Online

Course Description: Learn about energy, via the Internet! NRES 733 is a one credit graduate level course of UWSP's College of Natural Resources. You can view the web-based portion of the course now for free. Registrants will take part in online discussions with the instructor, energy resource experts, and each other to analyze energy concepts and misconceptions. You will explore energy readings and related Web sites, and conduct activities such as interpreting utility bills, home energy audits, and calculating the wattages of various appliances.
