

EMSU
2006

Environmental Management for Sustainable Universities

Transforming ideas into action: Building sustainable communities beyond university campuses

4th International Conference June 26-30, 2006

This international conference is hosted by the Global Environmental Management Education Center (GEM), a center within the College of Natural Resources at the University of Wisconsin – Stevens Point. Building on the work of earlier EMSU conferences, participants in the 2006 event will focus on transforming ideas into action and building sustainable communities beyond university campuses. The conference is targeted for a broad audience from university, business, government and non-government organizations.

Keynote Speakers

Jared Diamond

Scientist and Author

Robert F. Kennedy, Jr.

Environmental Activist and Author

Call for papers

Visit gem.uwsp.edu for details on this conference including guidelines for paper proposals. For more information email EMSU.2006@uwsp.edu

The conference program features a field day included in the registration fee, with field trip options slated to include tours of sustainable forestry on the Menominee Indian Reservation, renewable energy applications in homes and businesses, sustainable and conservation agriculture, land use planning, best environmental practices in industry and on campuses, and more.

Conference Themes:

- Informing Local Smart Growth Decisions
- Engaging Business and Industry Commitment
- Enhancing Intercultural Understanding in the Neighborhood
- Greening Energy Systems
- Educating for Sustainable Livelihoods
- Introducing Best Environmental Facilities Management Operations