

Remise: The act of making a simple and immediate offensive action following the original attack, in the same line, without withdrawing the arm, after the opponent has parried or retreated, when the latter has quitted contact with the blade without riposting or has made a riposte which is delayed, indirect or composed.
Redoublement: A new action, either simple or compound, made on an opponent who has parried without riposting or has merely avoid the first attack by retreating or displacing the target.
Counter-time: An action made against an opponent's stop thrust.
Second intention parry riposte.
Pris-de-fer attack: A "taking" of the opponent's blade in an offensive or counter-offensive action. 1. The Bind. A taking of the opponent's blade executed by engaging the blade and moving it diagonally to the opposite quadrant of the target (i.e. from the inside high line to the outside low line, or the outside high line to the inside low line, etc)
2. The Croise. A taking of the opponent's blade made by engaging the blade and moving it vertically to the opposite line.
3. The Opposition. A taking of the opponent's blade, wherein the fencer deviates the opponent's blade by keeping contact with it and pushing it aside (covering).
4. The Envelopment. A taking of the blade formed by engaging the opponent's foible with one's forte and executing a circular movement of the forte, bringing the opponent blade back to the starting engagement.
