'Never the Sinner' production honored again

A University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point Department of Theatre and Dance production has been honored by the Kennedy Center American College Theatre Festival in Washington D.C.

The company of "Never the Sinner," produced at UWSP last fall, was honored for costuming with the Distinguished Achievement in Men's Tailoring as well as for the acting company's ensemble performance.

This is an additional honor for the company, which was also recognized by the American College Theatre Festival through selection for the Region III festival in Saginaw, Mich., in January, where they mounted two performances of the show while seeing numerous productions, participating in workshops and competing in acting and design events.

As a result of the regional competition, Mercer Aplin was chosen to compete in the national festival at the Kennedy Center by winning the Sound Design Excellence Award. David LaRose was named a winner of the Society of Properties Artists and Managers Outstanding Achievement in Properties Design, Andy Broomell earned a Region III Judges Award for Outstanding Media Design and Thomas Bevan advanced to the semi-final round of the Irene Ryan acting competition.
