textbook and materials

- Sellers, Heather. The Practice of Creative Writing: A Guide for Students, 4th Ed. Boston: Bedford/St. Martin's, 2021.
- storage media for saving your work, such as a jump or flash drive. Save all versions of all drafts and keep all work returned to you with comments by instructor and peers; a portfolio will be due at the end of the semester.
- This course will make use of a Canvas site, Google docs, Word, your campus email, and possibly other platforms. All are free for students. Ask for help using them at any time.
- A computer and internet connection are needed. For meetings on zoom (instructor conferences, for example), a microphone and webcam are encouraged.

course description:

Training and practice for the beginning writer in various forms of poetry and fiction; class discussion of student work.

learning outcomes:

This course helps students meet multiple goals:

toward the AAS degree:

Critical and Creative Thinking (CCT) courses extend your ability to analyze issues and produce responses that are both systematic and innovative. The CCT requirement can be fulfilled with qualifying coursework in any discipline. If you are in CCT classes you can expect to:

- Identify and investigate problems;
- Execute analytical or creative tasks;
- Combine or synthesize existing ideas, images, or expertise in ways that result in a unique and identifiable product.

toward the UWSP general education program:

Arts attribute:

• Describe, analyze or critique creative works utilizing knowledge of relevant aesthetic criteria or stylistic forms.

Do at least ONE of the following

- Identify and explain the relationship between particular traditions or genres of creative expression and their social, historical or cultural contexts.
- Demonstrate an understanding of creative expression by producing or performing a creative work.

instructor's specific learning outcomes:

Processes of Creative Writing

- Explore invention techniques and activities individually and collaboratively throughout the semester. These activities may include but are not limited to free writing, journal keeping, brainstorming, imaginative association, creativity exercises, generating multiple versions of a particular piece.
- Generate and revise with specific elements (such as image, line, juxtaposition) whether for exercises or longer pieces.
- Practice critical feedback techniques and activities for works-in-progress throughout the semester which may include but are not limited to large and/or small group workshop discussions, one-on-one partner exchanges, and written peer draft critiques.
- Show development in receiving and responding to feedback.
- Demonstrate (by the end of the semester) holistic revision of pieces of creative writing to rework aspects of drafts that shape overall development, such as character, setting, voice, theme, conflict, tone.
- Demonstrate editing not only for error correction but for "the best words in the best order" (Coleridge), that is, editing for precision, concision, care, and originality in style and syntax.
- Engage in writing that involves reflection and self-assessment of abilities and skills covered in learning outcomes, including their own creative choices.

Reading as a Creative Writer

- Identify, understand and use vocabulary of genre elements. These elements may include but are not limited to:
 - o Fiction: characterization, plot, and conflict.
 - o Poetry: imagery, musicality, and use of forms.
 - o Drama: dialogue, plot, and stage directions.
 - Creative Nonfiction incorporates elements from other genres. (To some extent, all genres rely on "Show Don't Tell," the ability to generate specific examples and actions. close reading of authors' work)
- Engage in close reading of authors' works.
- Identify and explain authors' creative choices and analyze the effects of those choices on a published text.

grading: What are the types of assignments we'll do and how can creative writing be graded?

	What is it?	Who sees?	How submitted?	What is being graded? (skills, learning outcomes)	Portion of grade?
Exercises	Used to generate ideas and practice with skills; most completed in journal for periodic checks (see calendar). A few are inclass collaborative activities, for points.	Classmates if you choose to share, and the instructor	Often written during class meetings, not always named in advance on daily schedule; send google journal link to Jill or turn in notebook journal two times	Entries are not graded on content, but on effort/attempt. Taking a stab and trying something new is more important than doing these "right"!	15% (20 points for each journal check (2); a few other exercises with points given in Canvas)
Canvas discussion posts, syllabus quiz	Practice close reading skills and analysis of assigned readings	Instructor and classmates see discussion board	Canvas discussion board	Your developing skills of "reading like a writer;" understanding of terms and elements; ability to apply them in analysis of professional works	15% (6 points each, plus syllabus quiz). Extra credit can be earned here.
Workshop feedback, reflections on workshop, story conference with instructor	Practice process skills of creative writing, including giving and responding to feedback.	Workshop group members and instructor see feedback you give; only instructor and you see your reflections	Workshop feedback given verbally and in writing in Canvas; reflections submitted to Canvas.	Your developing skills of using the creative writing process; "reading like a writer" skills also demonstrated in feedback given to peers.	25% (10 pts for each of 4 workshops; 4 points for 3 reflections; 10 points conference Extra Credit can be earned here.

4 Workshops	Develop freewriting into drafts for workshop; requires reflective author's note	Your small group workshop members and instructor	Post to Canvas assignment thread before class.	Graded on: timely submission effort; use of techniques; overall risk/creativity; and author's note for self-analysis skills	20% course grade
Final Portfolio	Assemble best examples of inclass writing; including some that show revisions since last submissions and strong editing; 4-6 page final reflection letter	Instructor sees	Submitted to Canvas	Your ability to analyze/reflect in the reflective letter; your use of processes to revise; and application of course techniques with some risk/creativity in "best pages" graded.	25%

Daily work grading, more detail:

I use a points system within the categories of exercises, discussion posts, reflections. In other grading categories—workshop grades, final portfolio—I assign holistic letter grades that correlate to the following percentages (and don't represent points "missed"). A = 95%; A- = 92%; B+ = 88%; B = 85%, etc. (This system allows me to, occasionally, acknowledge exceptional A+ work with a 97%, or 98%, or even sometimes a 100%.)

rubrics

See rubrics in Canvas for a breakdown on how the different assignments are graded. You'll notice that in some cases late work can still receive up to half credit (by the end of the module/unit), though please note that creates a bigger "ding" for a late workshop submission than for a late discussion post. (Late workshop submissions make it hard for the small group to workshop. Definitely discuss any emergencies or illnesses that affect workshop submission or grade with the instructor right away. See below section on late work.)

grading scale:

A 93-100; A- 90-92; B+ 87-89, B 83-86, B- 80-82; C+ 77-79, C 73-76, C- 70 - 72; D+ 67-69; D 60 - 66; F 59 and below.

course policies and how to do well in this class:

Attendance: Plan to attend every class period, and plan about an hour's worth of time before each class meeting (sometimes more) to complete readings and assignments; students will additionally prepare workshop submissions out of class, and for some workshops read others' submissions before class. During class, students will sometimes do journal writing or other exercises for points. (Journals checked a few times for points.) Attending workshops (and submitting drafts on time for workshops) is also a significant component of the overall grade, and students who attend class regularly will have a better grasp of how to approach workshop submissions and give feedback—and so perform better in the class.

 Use the daily schedule (see Canvas) so you know what's due what day and so you can see how soon workshops are coming up (which isn't as clear if you only look at the Canvas "assignments" tab or calendar).

Absences:

What to do if you miss one class?

Send me an email. You are not required to explain private details, but at least let me know your plan to catch up. I can also let you know what journal prompts you missed so you can add them to your journal. Note that if a workshop submission or workshop day was missed, more will be required for you to make up missing learning and to earn points, and the experience might not be as equal (you might not get as substantial feedback, if any, from peers).

What to do in the case of extended or multiple absences?

As we continue to deal with Covid, some students may need to stay home from class due to quarantine or illness or for other related reasons. Thank you or keeping others safe! Contact the instructor as soon as possible to discuss class work. You are still responsible for the work of the class, but I can work with you to find solutions, including possible extensions for assignments (for full credit) and ways to make up workshops (which might include writing center visits). I can direct you to textbook pages for further reading to help you understand concepts discussed during class and meet with you through zoom if you have questions—though I can't truly replicate everything done during class. In some cases, missing a significant portion of a class may mean that "withdrawing" from the class is the best option. See deadlines for the "W" date and discuss with the instructor and your advisor. For any illness or emergency near the end of the semester, students can discuss the "I" or "incomplete" option with the instructor (which gives students who have otherwise completed all coursework more time to complete one final project, like a final portfolio).

Late Work

Assignments:

Assignments due before a class period (reading, often with discussion posts) are designed that way so learning in class can build on that work. Assignments due "by the start of class time" are only worth half credit if completed late—unless prior arrangement was made or in the case of illness or absence. (Email me in those cases to discuss.) Late work for half credit is to be completed by the end of the unit/module.

Workshop drafts:

 A late draft for workshop (peer review) means you miss being joined to a group (or sometimes the Canvas "swap" of submissions) and so you may lose points for participating in the workshop and may miss getting a review of your work from peers. Workshops are worth a lot of points in this class! If you have an emergency or illness, contact the instructor for information about how to earn points toward the workshop grade on the all-class review board. (Also used for earning extra credit.) You may also be able to get review from peers on your piece there.

Final Portfolios and "I" grades:

- No late final portfolios can be accepted. Final portfolios are due at the end of our scheduled final exam period, and so the official end of our class. (In the case of illness or emergency late in the semester, discuss "I" grade options with instructor—but that has to be discussed before the end of the course.)
- Revisions: All semester long you'll get feedback from peers and the instructor and using feedback to make revisions will be part of the final portfolio grading. (Workshop submissions themselves are graded mostly on attempt and on demonstrating understanding of concepts in author's notes and pieces; the final portfolio is where you get to show off your more polished
 "final" products—and so is worth more!)
- Extra Credit: See Canvas. Extra credit opportunities toward your workshop grade may also be available by offering extra reviews on the all-class discussion board. For credit the reviews need to be substantial and cover all workshop steps as we practice them in class. See Canvas.

extra help: Writing Center tutors are successful UWSP students who are available to discuss all types of writing at any stage of the drafting process, including brainstorming, conducting research, editing, or handling citations. Tutors work with experienced as well as struggling writers. One-time and regular appointments are available, free of charge to all students. Find the link for online appointments in our Canvas course. Please also see information about the DUO program on Canvas.

plagiarism and academic integrity: Work in this class must be your own. Plagiarized works (including discussion posts or workshop submissions or any writing in the course) will receive zeroes, and the instructor may pursue additional penalties, including course failure. All writing must be original to you and written this semester for this class and you should not collaborate unless collaboration is assigned. See the student handbook or ask if you have questions.

Covid mitigation: We will follow all university policies related to mitigating Covid, including wearing masks as required by university policy and sitting in the same regular "assigned" seats. (Moving seats is possible if you talk with me, though). See links in Canvas and on the University's covid page for most recently updated policies:

Students with Disabilities

The University has a legal responsibility to provide accommodations and program access as mandated by Section 54 and the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). The university's philosophy is to not only provide what is mandated but also convey its genuine concern for one's total well-being. If accommodations are needed, please contact the instructor as well as the Disability and Assistive Technology Center (DATC), located on the Stevens Point campus. Students can also pick up an application for accommodations packet in the Solution Center.

- DATC contact information:
- (715) 346-3365 (Voice)
- (715) 346-3362 (TDD only)
- or via email at datctr@uwsp.edu

Preferred Names:

Class rosters and Canvas normally show the name that appears in accesSPoint for each student. Please notify the instructor if you would like to use a name that is different from the one listed, and if you'd like help requesting a change in the name that is officially listed. I invite all students to let me know their gender pronouns (and make sure Canvas lists them correctly) and I encourage anyone to tell me if I make a mistake in pronouncing or using your name or pronouns. I do care that I get it right, and it matters.
