Although the United States is a country made up of immigrants from various racial, ethnic and religious backgrounds and our Declaration of Independence states that “all men are created equal,” many of the immigrant groups that constitute our nation have been victims of egregiously unequal treatment. The purpose of this course is to explore the literatures of several ethnic groups that have been marginalized by America’s dominant white Christian male culture. We will closely read great works of African American, Latinx American, Native American, Asian American, and Jewish American Literature in order to encounter the perspectives of multiple American cultures. The goal is not only to become more sensitive and sympathetic to the plights of minority populations, but also to see the world through different eyes and to confront and challenge our own unconscious assumptions about race, culture, and creed.

While cultural themes will orient our discussion of literary texts, much of our time will be spent developing critical reading, writing, and thinking skills. In class you will be given the opportunity to develop your own interpretations of the literary works under discussion, and exchange opinions with your peers in a way that can stimulate thought and broaden your perspective on the course readings. You will also devote a great deal of time to honing your writing and interpretive skills through various exercises, handouts, and short writing assignments. By the end of the course, you will learn to write persuasive prose about literature. Finally, this class will give you the opportunity to appreciate some of the finest works of literary art that Americans have produced, while enriching and deepening your experience of life. I hope you enjoy it!

Attendance/Participation

English 284 is a seminar-like, discussion-based course, so attendance and regular participation in class discussions is required. However, because I realize there are times when you must miss class due to illness, a family emergency, or other pressing matters, you will be allowed two free unexcused “absences” without penalty. If you know you have to miss class, send me an email ahead of time whenever possible. The participation grade will be lowered for each additional “absence” beyond the first 2 “absences” (An A will become an A-, an A- will become a B+, and so on). An “absence” beyond 6 unexcused absences (not counting the two free “absences”) will result in a student failing the course. Obviously, I will take into account extraordinary reasons for an absence such as a severe accident or illness, a family emergency or death, a recognized religious holiday, or jury duty. Just let me know!

Academic Honesty and Plagiarism

Plagiarism, or taking credit for words or ideas not your own, is a serious offence and will lead to dire consequences. The penalty for plagiarism ranges from failing the course to expulsion from the university. See the Student Rights and Regulations handbook for more information about plagiarism and its consequences. If I think you have plagiarized, I will meet with you and refer your name to a disciplinary committee responsible for overseeing the investigation of academic crimes. Except for acknowledged quotations, all of your work is to be written in your own words. You may not copy from a book, another student’s paper, a webpage, or any other source. If you do so, you will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law.
