Directors’ Notes

Welcome to Afterimages 2010! We are thrilled to be sharing our newest student choreography with you. This year, the process began in September with the development of twenty-one student-generated choreographic ideas. After months of exploration and rehearsal, you will see eleven dances featured on the Jenkins Theatre stage tonight. This year’s program offers a variety of styles including ballet, contemporary, jazz, modern and tap. Each year the range of choreographic approaches inspires us as our peers bring unique ideas to life. We especially admire the dancers and their commitment to the artistic process and vision of the choreographers. Their ability to work openly and expressively shines through in each piece.

Earlier this semester the dance program hosted the second annual Afterimages Outtakes, an informal studio showing that featured an additional ten exciting, inventive dances. Afterimages Outtakes affords choreographers and dancers the opportunity to share their work in a performance environment with family and friends. We were thrilled to see packed audiences at these two performances and look forward to continuing to highlight all of the creative energy that student choreographers and dancers pour into the Afterimages process.

Afterimages is created completely by students—from direction, choreography and performance to design and publicity. This concert would not be possible without the dedication and collaborative contributions made by our Department of Theatre & Dance costume shop, scene shop, lighting designers, costume designers, stage managers and run crews. We are very grateful for their ongoing support of this production. We would also like to give a special thanks to all of our Department mentors, especially Michael Estanich and the dance faculty for their support and dedication through the entire Afterimages process.

Thank you for coming and enjoy the show!

Program Note:
This piece focuses on two young women. Growing up, they had a special place in the woods. They ran to create paths, and become closer as sisters. With one always willing to lead the way, the sisters always knew they could rely on one another. Now after many years they return to their place in the woods and remember what role it played in their bond with one another.
