WILLIAM C. HANSEN

- William Hansen was the first alumnus of the school to be named president.
- He was the longest-tenured president in the history of the school, and during this time, the enrollment and faculty tripled.
- In 1953 there were three majors offered, ten years later there were 22.
- A benchmark of his leadership was the establishment of a conservation education major, the first to be offered in the nation.
- Long-needed buildings were constructed, among them the Science Building, the first $2 million structure on campus.
